

Jennifer Hsiaw, AIA

An Atlanta transplant from California by way of Virginia, Jennifer Hsiaw is currently practicing at Smith Dalia Architects in downtown Atlanta, working on a variety of projects ranging from commercial to industrial to multi-family. Since her early introductions to architecture, she has been keenly interested in the social and environmental performance of buildings and spaces and strives to integrate contextual exploration as a key component of the design process. She has consistently kept one foot in academia, leading undergraduate studios and courses at the University of Virginia, James Madison University, and most recently Georgia Tech, as well as being a graduate of the 2023 AIA Georgia Christopher Kelley Leadership Development Program.